Dear Mr. Buckley,

Subject: A Quoted Word to Post on www.rollingbozorevue.com

We are the initiators of a an internet web page that focuses on comedy, arts and literature. In order to cater to the tastes of our audience, we are soliciting from you a word, just a single word, that you use in your everyday conversation which may never cross the lips of most speakers of American English in our beloved country. Your colorful acquaintance with and nurturing use of our native language is one of the most alluring relationships in the history of American art and literature. All I'm asking for is a word. (A single word that we can post on our website from you as an endorsement of the higher use of language. If you wish to provide more than a single word - like an complete thought from you or even a hearty rebuff of our efforts to solicit input from you, that would be great, too. Please fill out the enclosed prepared form and mail it back to us in the pre-stamped, self-addressed envelope we've included. Thank you sir, and may God Bless you.

Respectfully yours,

Mark G. Williams, P.E.

HA-HA-HA-HA-HA-HA-HA-HA!! GET OUTTA HERE!!

What, did one of those jokers at the Democratic Party put you guys up to this? Was it Carville? Tell him and his cronies I'm not falling for this kind of charade!!

How dare you pusillanimous pip-squeaks harass me with a shit-laden shuttlecock such as this! Off with you!!!

Oh, alright – you terebratious, truttaceous twits, here's a word for your "site" (write below):

INTEGRUMENT

Oh, what the hell, I'm in a gracious mood. Here's a complete thought that you should think about in the future (attach extra pages as needed):

Signed (maybe):
